

Coexisting with Wildlife in the Beaver Hills Biosphere

Working together so people and wildlife in the Biosphere have the space they need to thrive

FAQs

What are you doing?

We are working with Dialogue Partners Inc. to understand how people can coexist with wildlife in the Beaver Hills Biosphere. These workshops are a first step in that direction. We are looking to get a better understanding of community values, issues and priorities from people who live, work and recreate in the Beaver Hills as they relate to wildlife.

What will happen?

We launched the project in May 2021 and our community engagement efforts relating to coexisting with wildlife in the Beaver Hills Biosphere will continue until late 2021. The feedback collected this spring will be consolidated and reviewed by the Biosphere over the summer. In the fall, we plan to kick off a second phase of engagement focussed on working with community members to determine how best to promote human-wildlife coexistence in the area.

Do I need any special knowledge to participate?

No. Prior knowledge is not a requirement to participate in this conversation – you need only have a desire to coexist with wildlife in the Beaver Hills region. Your perspectives and insight will help us understand how to share and manage a working landscape that sustains both people and wildlife.

What will you do with my input?

We are seeking your advice and innovation about coexisting with wildlife in the Beaver Hills and will incorporate your input and recommendations into project decisions to the maximum extent possible. Your input will be used to create a Human-Wildlife Coexistence Strategy for the Beaver Hills that respects the needs of both people and wildlife.

Will you tell me how my input was used?

Absolutely. We will be open and transparent about how your input is used. We will report back to you about what we heard during these conversations and how that input informed project decisions. Together, we can make the most out of this unique landscape. We want to work together to ensure wildlife and people all have the space they need to thrive in the Beaver Hills Biosphere.
